The salling of the Esperanza of the Ward Line for Cuba to-day afforded the second instance within a week of the thoughtfulness of honoymeening couples' friends. Last summer at Rye Heach, C. E. Story jr., of Mount Vermon, far in the lead in a 32-yard swimming race, gave up the race to rescue Miss Mary Secton Geles, daughter of C. T. Gales of the American Tobacco Company. So last night they were married.

A noisy group of friends was at the pier to see them off, and after politing them with old shoos—one of which landed in the face of Capt, Curtis of the Esperanza—and rice and confetting them with old shoos—one of which landed in the face of Capt, Curtis of the Esperanza—and rice and confetting them with old shoos—one of which landed in the face of Capt, Curtis of the Esperanza—and rice and confetting them with old shoos—one of which landed in the face of Capt, Curtis of the Esperanza—and rice and confetting them with old shoos—one of which landed in the face of Capt, Curtis of the Esperanza—and rice and confetting them with old shoos—one of which landed in the face of Capt, Curtis of the Esperanza—and rice and confetting them with old shoos—one of which landed in the face of Capt, Curtis of the Esperanza—and rice and confetting them with old shoos—one of which landed in the face of Capt, Curtis of the Esperanza—and rice and confetting them with old shoos—one of which landed in the face of Capt, Curtis of the Esperanza—and rice and confetting them with old shoos—one of which landed in the face of Capt, Curtis of the Esperanza—and rice and confetting them with old shoos—one of which landed in the face of Capt, Curtis of the Esperanza—and rice and confetting them with old shoos—one of which landed in the face of Capt, Curtis of the Esperanza—and rice and confetting them with old shoos—one of which landed in the face of Capt, Curtis of the Esperanza—and rice and confetting them with old shoos—one of which landed in the face of Capt, Curtis of the Esperanza—and rice and confetting them with

Seven Famous Chefs Tell of Brand New Dishes

Readers of Next Sunday's World Get a Page of Recipes Prepared Especially by New York's Greatest Artists

In a moment of constructive humor, Louis the Eleventh of France forced his dear friend the good Bishop Balue to cut lampreys to mordinate repletion, so that at length the reverend prelate felt more pain than during the period in which he was confined to the famous cage at Loches, which he had had constructed

Undoubtedly the sin of gluttony rested on the King and not on the Bishop; but just imagine the grief of the most noted Chef of his time when he found the dish he had prepared at such pains so shockingly misused. It would have cost many thousands of doilars to get a recipe from that imperial cook, but the Sunday World Magazine presents brand new recipes from no less than seven famous chefs now in New York, all of which the readers of The World can have FREE by simply getting their Sunday

Think of a dinner prepared on the recipes of seven of the Greatest Masters of the Culinary Art in the world! These seven incomparable artists tell you how to prepare a dish of succotash that would make, simply on mentioning it, a gastronome's mouth water. And those "olives surprises" you love so well-not to speak of that delicious epaghetti upon which Oliver of the Beaux Arts stakes his professional reputation. Then to our sweetbreads with mushrooms, those marvels of the Gotham menu, not to speak of the "mousse of chicken a la Virginienne," in which Rene Anjard of the Waldorf-Astoria reveals the sensibilities of your true artist. Hardly have we discussed that dish, when along comes a recipe for "minced chicken a la King." which Chef Ballard of Louis Martin's got in a moment of inspiration, and should have been written in golden letters, so as never to be lost. "Fish" did you say? Well, there's a new way of preparing bluefish-"fisherman's way"-which that veritable genius of the Hotel Plaza, Nestor Lathard, guarantees to make all other ways look like that famous road paved with good intentions which leads to-well, never mind about that, but get busy with the "oyster croutons" from the Ritz-Carlton; and by that time, you will be like that mediaeval prince who after one good dinner asked that he might die then, as he could not be sure of getting anything quite so good again here or hereafter.

Certainly you must not miss that greatest of pages in the Sunday Magazine, that most delicious, appetizing, soul-satisfying. stomach-titillating, mouth-watering, mind-resting, eye-entrancing page of golden recipes specially prepared by seven of the greatest wonders of the modern world, the seven greatest Chefs of New
